NEWSPAPER ARCHIVE®

RENO, WASHOE COUNTY, NEVADA, TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 8, 1897.

The men who say that they are made of tough stuff and can stand anything, generally find that death is made of tougher stuff and are found in a coffin at an age when they should be doing their best and most useful work. It is time enough for a man to brag about his toughness when he has reached a ripe old age. The men who live long lives are the ones who take care of their health in youth and maturity. They realize the truth of the old saying that "a stitch in time saves nine." The ones who don't do this die of nervous prostration, heart failure and consumption.

The best of all health-restorers and health preservers is Dr. Pierces Golden Medical Discovery. It cures 68 per cent. of all cases of consumption. It wards off nervous troubles and wasting diseases. It corrects all disorders of the digestion, invigorates the liver and restores the appetite. It fills the arteries with the pure, rich, red blood of health. It tears down, and carries off old, inert and half-dead tissues and replaces them by new. It builds firm, healthy flesh. It makes the muscles strong and elastic and steadies and tones the nerves. It cures debility and weakness of every description. It is the product of the life-time experience and study of an eminent and skillful specialist, Dr. R. V. Pierce, for thirty years chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. Thousands of men and women have testified to its virtues. Druggists sell it.

There is nothing in the world "just as good," although avaricious druggists will sometimes say so for the sake of the greater profit to be made upon the inferior article.

AN OCTOBER ALLEGRO.

We are yellow autumn leaves, decked with russet and with red, Franklin in gold and in the proudest of attire.

But with October breeze hath lured us from the trees.

And hath plied to us to dance to his desire.

Such a tone he now hath blown, full of life and gayety.

Like the darts of the orioles in May,

That we yield us to the course of his dominating force.

And come drifting down, his mandate to obey.

We refuse to borrow sorrow from the morrow can't be here.

For the music of the day doth make us mad.

And the fate of leaf or man must baffle us best it can.

When the wind doth will to wanton and be glad.

What intoxicating pleasures are the mirths of our dance.

What a thousand of us rise as in a cloud.

Or when as from a sleep, we awake in sudden weep.

And around do reel so swiftly eddying crown.

How we twirl in merry swirl as astir the wind we whirl.

To seem to gain his rapturous embrace.

TH. he lifts us in his might to the glory of the light.

Where the swallows dip and swing in airy cheer.

And June wood dance in the fabled days of old.

When the gods for love did stoop to visit earth.

So in showers of splendid gold hath the winged messenger told of the springtime's joyous birth.

—W. D. BILBARGER in New York Sun.

Without a word the two strangers leaped from their horses, and, bending over the body, rifled it of its money belt, containing the golden burden. Not until that was done did they speak, and, although the first man had called to the messenger in Dutch and with a Boer's accent, now they spoke in English.

"I hit too hard, I'm afraid," said one. "He's not gone, is he?"

"Not he," said the other. "The night air will bring him round soon enough. Have we got all?"

"It's stowed snugly in the belt which I have; safe there. There is no time to divide up now. Picket the young 'un's horse beside him. We can't leave that running loose."

They did so, and soon the sound of their galloping horses was again smothered in the thick, rank grass as they rode off as swiftly and mysteriously as they had come.

The moon was up when the heavy dew from the cloudless sky and the night wind of the veldt brought back to Maxwell his lost senses. He staggered to his feet, and for a long time he stood looking at his impudent horse and pressing his throbbing head in a vain effort to remember what had happened. EASTERN ADVERTISING OFFICE, 230 Temple Court, New York City

THE COUNTY COMMISSIONER QUESTION.

The JOURNAL some weeks ago published an article giving the details of the now notorious action on the so-called "Fumigation Bill." The order was given by the Chairman of the Board of Commissioners to Dr. McN. Miller to proceed with the fumigation of certain rooms wherein a little child had died of scarlet fever. Dr. McN. Miller performed the duty and presented a bill for $76 15, which was first laid over and subsequently passed unanimously by the Board of Commissioners. Later the claim was vetoed by Auditor Shearer and the Board sustained the veto.

On the next morning after the bill had been passed the JOURNAL's article appeared and Mr. Beck that day addressed letters to Judge Cheney and Hon. T. V. Julian asking for an investigation, and also one to Auditor Shearer recalling the bill. The last communication reached its destination too late, for the Auditor had already returned the bill with his reasons for its disapproval. About the same time Mr. Beck forwarded his resignation to Governor Sadler, the last clause of which reads as follows:

"Unless such investigation shall find me blameless, or in case such investigation shall not be had for term of sixty days from date hereof, then, or in either event, you will consider this as my final resignation and proceed under the law to appoint my successor."

On last Saturday a special session of the Grand Jury was called to inquire into "the charges" as interpreted by Mr. Beck, although no one had made complaint and the article in question, after a careful perusal by four able attorneys, was pronounced free of any language that could be construed into a charge even by innuendo. Just why the Grand Jury was so hastily summoned to inquire into this particular matter and within the limit of time prescribed in Mr. Beck's resignation was not explained in the report, and the fact that only three days grace remained was very suggestive to say the least.

The Grand Jury seemed to take the same view, however, that Mr. Beck had taken, that the JOURNAL had made certain charges, etc. Now if the article contained charges against Mr. Beck, the same must have applied to Mr. Frazier and Mr. Hymers as well, but these gentlemen have not as yet posed as martyrs before the public.

The JOURNAL denies that it made any charges, but simply published the details of the transaction, presenting the facts, which the Auditor's veto and subsequent action of the Board of Commissioners in sustaining his veto, bore out.

Mr. Beck was not asked to resign and at the time that he filed his resignation, those connected with this office and who had been on very friendly terms with him thought it a foolish move, and a number of his most intimate friends advised against such a proceeding. He was determined, however, and whether Mr. Beck is retained or an appointment of some one else is made there will be more or less feeling if not unpleasant complications.

If his resignation is to be considered as basis on which final action must be taken, and if he is to be governed by the Grand Jury report, he certainly cannot feel that he is exonerated or held "blameless," if he construes the JOURNAL article into charges, for the Grand Jury says, "we commend the action of the Auditor in refusing to draw his warrant in payment of this bill and believe there was no law authorizing its payment." If there was no law authorizing its payment, there was certainly no law authorizing the Board of Commissioners to contract an expense in the name of the county which could not be legally paid.

CLICK MITCHELL, a Negro, made a criminal assault on Mrs. Gaumer, at Urbana, Ohio, but he will do so no more. A mob broke into the jail where Mitchell was confined, took him out and hanged him to a tree in the court house yard. Two thousand citizens took part in the lynching and made no attempt to disguise themselves. The militia fired on the crowd killing two citizens and wounding nine others, one of whom will die. Had this occurred in Alabama, there would have been much adverse comment, but as it happened in Ohio, only regrets will be expressed. Mrs. Gaumer is a widow of good reputation and about 45 years of age. She is in a critical condition and may not recover.

THE Federal Courts in California have taken the Durrant case entirely out of the hands of the State authorities. Warden Hale of San Quentin prison has been cited by Circuit Judge Morrow to appear before the Supreme Court of the United States at Washington on August 2nd. The effect of this citation is to stay the execution of Durrant regardless of the opinion of the Attorney General of California.

SEVERAL California newspapers, which have heretofore been advocates of a centralized government, are demanding States rights, among others, the right to punish the murderers of innocent girls without Federal interference.

TELEGRAPHIC NOTES.

The House passed the Senate amendment to the act to authorize the construction of a bridge across Pearl river, Mississippi.

The lumber yard in San Francisco known as the Truckee Lumber Co., and owned by Miss Kruger, was destroyed by fire yesterday, loss $40,000.

The Queen Regent of Spain has expressed unqualified approval of the present Cuban policy by reappointing the Canovas Ministry unchanged, as that was the only question involved.

Dr. G. O. Brown, late of San Francisco, who was called to a church at Chicago and against whom charges were preferred by his San Francisco church also from Dubuque, Iowa, was reported favorably upon by a committee and accepted.

The Senate used up the time yesterday in discussing the tariff bill. Mr. Berry of Arkansas made an attack on the bill claiming that it had been framed in the interests of trusts and was distinctly on the lines of protection and not of revenue.

J. Breckinridge Payne, a descendant of some of Kentucky's best families, shot Percy Stockhouse, a racing man, at Lexington, Ky., yesterday inflicting a probably fatal wound. The shooting resulted from a quarrel. W. C. P. Breckinridge will defend him.

It is reported that there are over 250,000 of the population of Cuba held by Spain in the rural districts as prisoners of war. A Spanish officer reports 150,000 of those almost in a starving condition. They are hemmed in by ditches and barbed wire fences and surrounded by a strong military guard.

W. J. Calhoon, Special Commissioner to Cuba to investigate into the death of Dr. Ruiz, an American citizen, reports that the autopsy shows that he died of congestion of the brain. There was no proof positive of any assault. He declined to give any details of the investigation until the report is made to the authorities at Washington.

The Viavi Cause.

It is impossible to take Viavi into the system without benefit. It is purely vegetable and as a nerve and tissue builder has no equal. It can be used with perfect safety by the most delicate, and is used upon the smallest children.

Patrons of the remedy can consult our physicians free of charge. I will take pleasure in explaining its various uses to all who may call.

4-ly

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys, will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whisky nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone to the organs, thereby aiding nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price 50c. per bottle at Hodgkinson's Drug Store.

Washington Well Fortified.

In view of the fact that the national capital was once taken and burned by a foreign enemy it is reassuring to know that a calamity so humiliating is not likely to occur again, even in case of sudden war.

Washington is the best defended city in the country. A hostile fleet could not now sail up the Potomac, as was done in 1814, when President Madison and his wife were compelled to make a hurried escape across the Potomac to avoid capture by the British.

For military and prudential reasons little has been allowed to be made known regarding the new works and the fortifications recently installed below the city, but for some years engineers have been busy at the river front. Some very formidable guns are now in position there, and a system of torpedo defenses has been perfected which would render the approach of an enemy's warship within 12 miles of Washington practically impossible.

The defensive works are located at the "elbow," or turn, of the Potomac where old Forts Washington and Sheridan stood, and where at one point the channel for vessels of deep draft is but 300 yards wide.

The guns are protected on the water side by emplacement walls of stone and concrete 70 feet thick, and on the land side by redoubts for infantry.

The rapidly increasing wealth and importance of Washington, the grand new public buildings and the vast sums of money and bullion in the treasury render these protective and defensive measures a matter of national importance and necessity.—Youth's Companion.

A Capital Advertisement.

"I always like to see that senator get to make a speech," said the drowsy looking man.

"He isn't very interesting."

"No. When he is on his feet I'm always sure that my nap will not be disturbed by any outburst of applause."—Washington Star.

Yesterday the State Government received from the Commissioner of the General Land Office a certified transcript of clear list No. 20 of selections made by the State of Nevada under the 2,000,000 acre grant. This list embraces 26,297.51 acres in the Carson City land district.

C. C. Hopkins, the Rambler bicyclist, arrived from the west last night. He has come prepared to fix everybody that wants a wheel, out in first-class style. He will beat E. C. Harris' cyclery for a day or two and will convince the most skeptical that the Rambler is the chief.

M. R. BOTH SIDES!

The "Gazette's" Varying Moods.

Its Editorial Two Months Ago And Its Opinion of Last Evening.

"H. H. Beck has a couple of interesting communications in this morning's JOURNAL one to Hon. A. E. Cheney asking that the matter of Prof. Miller's bill allowed by the Commissioners at the last meeting be made a matter for special investigation by the Grand Jury and the other to Auditor Shearer asking him to veto the claim pending further investigation. The claim, by the way, the Auditor vetoed twenty-four hours before Mr. Beck wrote his letter.

They are interesting because they prove one of two things, either Mr. Beck goes off half cooked and knows not what he does, or else he did not give the bill that consideration that he should before affixing his signature to it.

Mr. Beck has for the past fifteen years been denouncing other men as boodlers for acts of less importance than the one he is guilty of. For all T. K. Hymers has been denounced by Mr. Beck in unmeasured terms, we doubt if Mr. Hymers ever so far forgot himself as to put his signature to a bill as flagrantly wrong as the Miller bill. Not that Miller is not worthy his hire, so to speak, or that he should not be paid, but not until all other means are exhausted should he be paid out of the county Treasury.

We hear that Mr. Beck has sent his resignation to Governor Sadler and "pulled out" in favor of J. E. Jones. How true this is the Gazette does not know, but Mr. Beck was duly elected Commissioner for four years, and for him to get miffed and resign because one of his own acts has been criticised is babyish in the extreme, and we hope if the rumor is true Mr. Beck will lose no time in undoing his hasty action."

The Gazette headed the Grand Jury report as published in its last Saturday's issue as "Good at Whitewashing," or words to that effect.

The JOURNAL has no particular comments on the above. Read one side and then the other, coming from the same source, the one condemns in unmeasured terms the actions of Beck and Miller's bill as flagrantly wrong, and the other dodges behind the doubtful proposition that people were excited and demanded fumigation of the rooms; that the Grand Jury exonerated Beck, complimented Dr. Miller, and yet were a little inconsistent. In other words the Gazette slimes over the whole mess like a snake over a frog and swallows it.

Shaw's Big Company.

This superb combination appeared in the Opera House last evening, and as usual there was a crowded house. Something over a year ago the same combination was in Reno and by mingling with the people and their courteous and business like manner made many friends, and within a day or two all of the members of the company became a part of the community.

A few new faces are present, but Sam T. Shaw is the same whole-souled, good natured fellow as of yore, and Miss Jessie Shirley still charms everyone who witnesses her rendition of any character she portrays. Last night the "Jack of Diamonds" was presented and the large audience came away well pleased. Each evening a different play will be presented and the prices will stand at 10, 20 and 30 cents, no higher. During the week's engagement the JOURNAL will refer to the members individually, for every one of them are deserving of special mention.

RECKLESS NAT GOODWIN.

An illustration of How the Comedian Has Money to Burn.

A story I have just heard about Nat Goodwin is but another instance of his ticklers generosity and constant desire to turn money upon all possible occasions.

He had been in the habit of passing most of his time at a certain hostelry—it is all the description necessary of place—presided over by a fat, good-natured German. They had known each other well and were on excellent terms.

One day, during the sitting of a bill, that Mr. Goodwin voted an item of $50. In doing so he was naturally certain that the indenter was not his. Mine host was equally sure on his side of the contrary.

He was waxed hot and heavy.

"I don't care," said Goodwin, "I don't care a trifling amount like $50. It's a principle of the thing."

"I am very glad to hear that," retorted the host. "I don't care for $100."

"Perhaps not," doubted the comedian.

"But I'd sooner throw the money away than give it to you."

"I'll give it to you," exclaimed the German sarcastically. "You Lal money to burn, chink, I don't believe me dot."

"I don't care," returned Nat. "Well, I'll tell you what I'll do with it. I'll turn $50 right here before you receive the bill."

"Goodby!" said the host. "I'll call you when."

Without another word Nat Goodwin took his checkbook out of his pocket, drew out a check for $50, tore it out, lit a lighted match to it, and held it until it was reduced to ashes.

The German, who had watched the process with bulging eyes, banged a louder stamp on the disputed bill, recited his signature across it and left with a sigh:

"Clapping dividends! You can't get ahead of these actor fellows now—New York Journal."

SHAKING WITH 60,000.

The "God Bless You" of Honest Hearted People.

In an article describing "The Social Life of the President" in "The Ladies' Home Journal" ex-President Harrison lists the fatigues of handshaking and the benefits of being brought in contact with the good, honest hearted people of the country. "In the first two weeks of an administration," he says, "the president shakes hands with from 40,000 to 60,000 persons. The physical strain of this is very great, and if the president is not an instructed handshaker a lame arm and a swollen hand are result. This may be largely or entirely avoided by using President Hayes' method—take the hand extended to you and grip it before your hand is gripped. It is the passive hand that gets hurt. It has been suggested that a nod or bow should be substituted for the handshake, but it would be quite as admissible to use a revision of the Declaration of Independence.

"The interest which multitudes attach to a bad estate with the president is so great that people will endure the greatest discomfort and not a little peril to life or limb to attain it. These are not the idle seekers, but the good, honest hearted, patriotic people whose "God bless you" is a prayer and a benediction."

"They come to Washington for the inauguration, and later with excursions, but they are mostly to be found near their own homes. They come out to meet the president when he takes a journey, and his contact with them and their unselfish and even affectionate interest in him revive his courage and elevate his purposes. Mr. Lincoln is said to have called these popular receptions his "public opinion bath."

Gladstone and the Queen.

Gladstone is the one living man whose political experience stretches beyond that of the queen. His is the one figure that for a longer period than that of the queen has filled the political stage. That is a remarkable position for any public man to hold. To all others the queen represents knowledge, experience and training which none of them can possibly possess. She knows more about people, persons, movements, routine, than any man who may be one of her advisers.

She began by learning from the best of them; she ends by instructing them all. No one knows so much of the private history of men and of families, and in all her life there has been, with the exception of the Lady Florrie Hastings case, of which we yet know little or nothing, no example of any mistake or indiscretion on the part of the queen.

She has hated some, and merely disliked others, but every one of them has testified to her perfect faithfulness to them all—"Yoke of the Empire," by R. B. Hilt.

He Got It.

First Thug (after the hold up)—Did de old gent come down wid de doobie when you told 'im you wanted some money an you wanted it bad?

Second Thug (disgustedly)—Yes. He said he would take me at mo word, an he handed me out er $50 counterfeit bill.

against order, I'd like to try a shot at those bantes before dark, if there are any lying about on the banks."

"Of course, of course, old man," said the sergeant easily. "There's no commanding officer about with bothering regulations, and, to tell the truth, I'm going to leave the pioneers anyway and ain't worrying about any prisoners. I'm sorry for you, Maxwell, 'pon my soul I am, and if you want to escape, why, man, I'll look the other way, and Roberts too. I'll help you too. By Jove I will!"

He spoke with almost anxious enthusiasm, as if he really would like to see Maxwell take his rifle and horse and ride off, but the youngster only smiled and walked off to the river. It was getting dark rapidly. Crocodiles were about in all probability. Crocodiles were about in all probability, but the pioneer did not look to see. He waited a minute, and then, controlling his voice with an effort, he sang out as carelessly as he could:

"I say, you fellows, look here! I believe this is a diamond."

The ruse succeeded. The two troopers came leisurely down from the camp. Maxwell glared anxiously at them, and his eyes lit up triumphantly, for they were unarmed. They had left their guns and pistols and belts by the fire.

"Diamond!" cried Wayne, his pipe between his lips. "Let's see, Max. Ev. everything's possible in Africa. Why not diamonds here as well as at Kimberley? Where is it?"

Maxwell was standing on the very brink of the river, where the bank was two or three feet high above the swift water. Leisurely they approached him, coming to his side.

"Let's see," said Wayne again.

Suddenly Maxwell dashed between them, running some 20 yards away from the river. His rifle sprang to his shoulder, his eye glanced keenly through the sights.

"Well, here comes the croc!" he cried. "Move a foot and I'll drop you to the crocodiles! That's all right, it's my turn now."

He stood between them and their arms, all with his rifle, a repeater, ready to fire. They had turned white, and neither spoke. At last, with an oath, Wayne found utterance.

"Is this a job?" he cried angrily.

"About as much as when you hit me over the head with a knobkerrie," said Maxwell calmly. "I know now who the bantes were. You and your human pass! You talk too much, Sergeant Wayne! When you repeated that spit for help—"Wacht en beetje"—on the marsh today, I recognized your voice. When you told me how you and Roberts had been out hunting without me, you made me think, and now I know. Give me that belt next year skin—my belt!"

"Oh, you're crazy!" cried the sergeant, with a forced laugh. "What do you mean?"

"The day I saw about you when your gun was drawn held by the firewood you carried. Unbuckle it and throw it to me! I count three. Quick!"

The sergeant glared furiously, but made no movement.

"One!"

The sergeant suddenly moved his hand.

"Two!"

The sturdy trooper, Roberts, who had hitherto remained still, suddenly broke the silence by a torrent of oaths.

"You ass!" he cried, turning on Wayne. " Didn't I tell you to give me my share and throw away the belt? But you wouldn't. You waited a chance to bolt with it all. And now you've queer-ed us both!"

In a paroxysm of rage he flung his heavy rifle backward in the face of his accomplice. Wayne, taken by surprise, retreated, and his second shot carried him over the bank into the stream. He went down with an appalling cry, drawn from him not so much by dread of the current as by the swift and horrid recollection of what fearful beasts had dwelt their home. In such an instant the minds of men betray each its normal trend, and the two men left on the bank now proved what instincts swayed their actions.

"The belt! The belt!" yelled Roberts. "He's got the belt!" And he leaped from the bank to save the gold. Maxwell uttered no word. He had heard that despairing cry, had seen the agonized face as the man fell, and he dropped his rifle and leaped into the stream to save a fellow creature, although a moment before he was sternly determined to shoot him when he understood that the gold was missing.

"I'm going to get that belt back again," he said, and that morning he did.
